Best regards,

Murugesan R,
Director

Background Note

India has been a ‘developing country’ for quite a long time. Many developmental initiatives have been taken by various governments who have driven the economy so far. The reforms and strategic plans devised by the governments have furthered the growth of India to a very remarkable position. No doubt, India has shown tremendous development, both socially and economically. These developments could be observed as measured by the performance of key sectors and the economic indicators of India.

Call for Review Research Articles (Multidisciplinary)
